In 2010 I was preparing for my Lighting Certification test, for Lighting Designers. I was studying hard and really stressing. A few days before my Exam, I found a note that had the letters R T F Q on it was an encouraging message. "Read the F*##*ing Question". I laughed, saved the note and Passed my exam. George always seemed to have the right things to say whenever, I needed a kick in the rear or a Karma boost. George I love ya man and miss the hell out of you.

I won't say good bye honey, you will always be with me, always. You told me "til the tires fall off" I told you, "that's not going to happen honey" we will always be together. George brought sunshine and laughter into my life, I know he loved me, every day he did something for me to make my life happier, if I needed anything he would make sure I got it. I know it sounds silly but he really was my knight in shining armor. I will always love him. He's in my heart forever. Love you Evelyn Kay

I used to work for the same towing outfit with George back in the late 90's. We had a lot of laughs. I'll never forget the time George and I were sitting in his flat bed eating lunch. This guy comes up to George's window and asked if this was a tow truck and without skipping a beat George answers the guy and says "no way man these are aeroplanes". I started laughing so hard I spit part of my sandwich out on his dash. So the guy says oh ok and just walks off. Then George tells me to stop laughing so hard your shaking my truck. George had a great sense of humor and he was a good friend to me. I'll always remember him and the laughs we shared.

I was stuck in the mud by Gibson ranch. I called George and he said he would pull me out but had a couple tows to do. He showed up about midnight. I had about 200 yards of cable, chain, and towstrap layed out before he got there. There was ice on the towstraps, it was really cold that night. All i remember is George walking out to where i was. The glow of the lights from the towtruck were behind George and i remember seeing a ton of steam coming off of him. He pulled me out of the mud and was on his way before i had a chance to give him any money. He was a good man. He will be missed
